FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Three Missoula tax experts - an accountant, an economist, and a lawyer - will speak at the Montana Tax School, which will be in session at Montana State University Nov. 12, 13, and 14, according to Prof. Lester R. Rusoff of the law faculty.

Jack R. Dobbins, certified public accountant with the Missoula firm of Swanson and Dobbins, will discuss problems in the disposition of farms at a session scheduled at 2:15 p. m. Friday, Nov. 13. He will deal with problems arising because of the existence of growing crops. He is a 1950 graduate of MSU and he served as an Internal Revenue agent in Missoula from 1950 to 1953.

Dr. Richard E. Shannon, assistant professor of economics at MSU, will speak Friday at 4 p. m. His topic will be "Taxation in Montana." He will cover the nature and effect of the various Montana taxes, offered as background necessary for the consideration of possible changes in the structure of Montana taxation. He has taught at Michigan State, Ohio State, and Kenyon College. He holds M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Ohio State University.

Karl R. Karlberg, attorney with Smith, Boone and Rimel, will speak Friday on "The Relationship between Subchapter S and State Taxation." His talk, at 10 a. m., will deal with problems arising under state tax law for a client who elects to have undistributed corporate income taxed to shareholders instead of the corporation. It will stress recent changes in the Montana Corporation License Tax. Karlberg holds an LL. B. from MSU and an LL. M. from New York University.

The tax school is sponsored by the MSU Law School and directed by Prof. Rusoff. Persons interested in registering for the sessions can get detailed information from Prof. Rusoff at the MSU Law School, Missoula.
